The City and Guilds of London Institute was established in 1878, primarily to educate young craftsmen in their particular trades. The Institute was founded jointly by the Corporation of the City of London and a number of the large Livery companies of the City, the descendants of the old craft guilds. Hence our title: City from the part played by the Corporation, and Guilds, the role of the city Livery companies. In 1900 the Institute was granted a Royal Charter, so giving it independent status. This means that we are totally independent of the British Government and its agencies and are funded directly from the income earned from our services to industry, business and education.

The Confederation of tourism, Hotel and Catering Management was established in 1982 to provide recognised standards of management training appropriate to the needs of the hotel and travel industries, via its syllabi, examinations and awards. These have been continuously developed and improved to ensure that they are relevant and up to date. This has been carried out under the careful scrutiny and supervision of experts in all aspects of the hotel, tourism and travel industries.

In the past 5 years CTHCM has registered over 15,000 students on its programmes.

CTHCM programmes are well respected in the hospitality, tourism and travel industries. This is clear from the programme endorsements it has received from the HCIMA, (Management Programmes), and Virgin Atlantic, Star Alliance and GTMC (Travel Programmes). Students can be confident a CTHCM qualification is excellent preparation for the beginning of a promising career.
